IN ONE SENTENCE

A credible message and a short enquiry form gave interested home buyers a clear next step without making the advertising feel pushy.

A clear next step for people considering home finance

Home finance is not an impulse purchase. People usually need time, clarity and confidence before sharing their details. The campaign connected the aspiration of home ownership with a practical enquiry process while keeping the tone professional and measured.

CAMPAIGN OBJECTIVE

Generate home-finance enquiries through Meta Instant Forms.

MY ROLE

Campaign strategy, creative, copy, setup, form structure and ongoing optimization.

The challenge

Potential customers may be interested in home finance but still hesitate to submit their details. The campaign had to look credible, explain the opportunity quickly and avoid language that sounded like a guaranteed approval or an unrealistic financial promise.

What I handled

Campaign planning and setup

Creative concept and execution

Ad copy and headline writing

Audience structure and testing

Lead-form setup

Performance review and optimization

WORKING PRINCIPLE

For a financial service, trust is part of the conversion path. The ad has to feel useful before the form can feel safe.

A practical, trust-first campaign structure

The campaign was built as a repeatable process rather than a single advertisement. Each stage helped move the user from initial interest to a useful follow-up conversation.

01

Frame the opportunity clearly

The message connected home ownership with a straightforward invitation to learn more about available finance options.

02

Use a credible tone

The creative and copy were designed to feel professional and informative, not like a guaranteed-approval promotion.

03

Keep the form purposeful

The form collected only the details needed to begin a useful conversation, reducing hesitation and unnecessary drop-off.

04

Make measured decisions

Individual ads were reviewed for lead volume, average cost and consistency. Weak variations were refined while stronger ones received more budget.

How the optimization worked

Optimization decisions were based on lead volume, cost per lead and the stability of each ad over time.

WHAT WE WATCHED Lead volume, average cost per lead, ad-level consistency and form completion.

The campaign result

The campaign generated 98 platform-reported home-finance leads at an average cost of AED 3.67 per lead, giving the follow-up team a steady pool of interested prospects.

What made it work

High-consideration services do not need loud advertising. A credible message and a simple enquiry path can be more persuasive.

Key takeaway

The campaign worked because it respected the decision-making process. Instead of trying to close a complex financial service inside the ad, it created enough clarity and trust for the user to start a real conversation.
